LEGEND

Light to Medium Bodied Dry White Wine

These are light and refreshing wines that are perfect with river fish, salads, vegetarian cuisine, seafood soups.

Medium Bodied Fruitful White Wine

Fruity and easy drinking, they can match to a range of lighter to medium bodied dishes such as, seafood, crustaceans or chicken dishes and can usually pair well with bitter or spicy Asian dishes.

Fuller Bodied Dry White Wine

Fuller flavoured, dry and often matured in oak to gain further complexity these wines are perfect with salmon, chickert pork, veal and small game birds.

Light to Medium Bodied, Complex, Dry Red Wines

Wines such as Pinot Noir from Burgundy or New Zealand, these pair well with duck and small game, in warm climates they may even be served slightly chilled and can be paired with Asian spices.

- Light to Medium Bodied, Fruitful and Richly Flavoured Red Wines
 Ranging from the lighter fruity Gamays of Beaujolais to medium bodied Merlot wines from Bordeaux and around the world, these can be paired well with Salmon to Chicken, Pork or Veal, savory sausages, charcuterie and flavoured Asian dishes with reasonable levels of spice.
- Full to Medium Bodied, Richly Flavoured and slightly Spicy Red Wines

These rich reds often have hints of pepper, all spice and mixed peel spices from their varietal mix of Shiraz or Syrah, Grenache, Mourvedre and come from the Rhone Valley and South of France and Australia.

Full to Medium Bodied, Dry and Complex Red Wines

Often made up of the Bordeaux varieties (Cabernet Sauvignon, Cabernet Franc, Merlot, Petit Verdot, Malbec) they can be dark and brooding wines, firm tannins with plenty of oak maturation, whether from Bordeaux, California, South America, these are exceptional with steak, lamb, goat and most fuller flavoured dishes.

ROSE WINE

Provence

Provence is a large wine-producing area, best-known for its rosé wines, the most famous of which is Côtes de Provence. However, the Provence vineyard also produces red wines, including some very rich red wines from the Var, and "grey wine" from the Camargue area. The most famous of the area's white wines is Bandol, celebrated since the middle ages.

BORDEAUX BLENDS

Bordeaux Blends are made up for the most part by the varieties Cabernet Sauvignon, Merlot and Cabernet Franc. Right Bank appellations such as Saint Emillion and Pommerol are usually dominated by Merlot and then Cabernet Franc with only small additions of Cabernet Sauvignon. On the Left Bank, in the Medoc region, Cabernet Sauvignon is the dominant variety with small additions of Merlot, Cabernet Franc and even smaller amounts of Petit Verdot.
